

5. Describe a person you know who likes to talk a lot.

You should say

Who this person is?

How you know him/her?

What he/she likes to talk about?

And explain how you feel about this person.

The person I would like to talk about is my colleague, Sarah. She is a vibrant and outgoing individual who always has something to say on any given topic.

I got to know Sarah when we started working together at our current job a couple of years ago. Since then, we have developed a good rapport and often engage in conversations during our breaks.

Sarah is someone who enjoys discussing a wide range of subjects, but she particularly likes talking about current events, travel experiences, and new technologies. She has a knack for storytelling and can captivate her audience with her engaging narratives.

I admire Sarah's ability to keep conversations lively and engaging. Her enthusiasm for sharing knowledge and experiences is contagious, and I always learn something new or gain a fresh perspective after talking with her. While her chattiness can sometimes be overwhelming, I appreciate her passion for communication and the positive energy she brings to our workplace.

While her proclivity for verbosity can occasionally overshadow the voices of others in a conversation, I am consistently impressed by her ability to articulate complex ideas with clarity and finesse.
